First Generation

1. Martin MEAD¹ was born² 17 Mar 1767 in Nine Partners, Dutchess, NY. He died 6 May 1850 in Underhill, Chittenden, VT and was buried² in Underhill Flats Cemetary, Underhill, Chittenden, VT.

BIOGRAPHY: The Mead Line:

BIOGRAPHY: Removed with his parents to West Rutland, VT. 1774, having lived with them from 1769 to 1774 at Manchester, VT. After his marriage in 1796 he settled in Pittsford, VT. Sept. 11, 1806 he bought of his brother Cary for $900 a farm of 94 acres on Brown's River in Underhill, between the Flats and the Center, ever since in possession of the family. The following March he removed thither with his wife and five children, cleared the ground himself, and built a little log house.

BIOGRAPHY: When the war of 1812 came he shoulder his gun and went to the front and fought in the battle of Plattsburg, Sunday, Sept. 11, 1812. On that day his wife and children went up the hill on the south side of the river, where they distinctly heard the roar of guns. His eldest son, Zebulon, aged fourteen, went with him as a fifer, leaving the mother to care for the farm and six children, the oldest a girl of twelve. In 1881, having become old and feeble, he deeded the farm to his son Seth, who cared for the aged parents as long as they lived. He died of gravel, the result of wet feet got in crossing over the hill to Lee River as a witness in a law-suit, and was buried in the cemetery at Underhill Flats.

BIOGRAPHY: He was a Democrat in politics. Late in life he joined the Congregationalist church at Underhill.

BIOGRAPHY: He was second cousin to Gen David Mead who founded Meadville, Pa.

Martin married^{3,4} Freeloove WRIGHT on 12 Nov 1796 in Rutland, VT. Freeloove was born³ 28 Oct 1774 in Rutland, VT.

BIOGRAPHY: The Mead Line:

BIOGRAPHY: She was named for her mother; and after marriage she lived first at Pittsford, VT, where her husband cleared up a farm of heavy timber, built good buildings, and set out a fine apple orchard before removing to Underhill after ten years.

BIOGRAPHY: She belonged to the First Congregational Church of Underhill from Oct. 28, 1808 for over fifty years. For years before her death she was nearly blind. She was buried in the cemetery at Underhill Flats. Her obituary in the current papers was:

BIOGRAPHY: Died in Underhill Nov. 24 widow Freelove Mead, relict of Martin Mead, in the eight-fifth year of her age. The departed has long sustained an honorable standing in the Congregational church; she leaves behind her ten children, fifty-one grandchildren, and more than thirty of the fourth generation, a large company of whom shed tears on the day of her burial.

BIOGRAPHY: In 1915 520 descendants of hers were counted. She was a woman of marked characteristics and unusual ability. Her fearless and daring spirit are illustrated by the following anecdote. A few years after removing to Underhill she went back to visit (the Footes?) in Cornwall, unaccompanied, on horseback with a baby in her lap and a little one behind. Having a new saddle of which she was very choice, and not wishing to wet the girth when they forded the Onion River, she dismounted, unfastened the saddlegirth and threw it up over the saddle, mounted again, and crossed safely. The saddle is now in possession of Clarence Powell of Cambridge.

BIOGRAPHY: For years they had no stove, and depended on an open fire for heat. Having no tablecloth she would wash off the bare round table after meals, and tip it up before the fireplace to dry; but in cold weather it would sometimes freeze before it was dry. She did not like the first stove at all, missing the bright glow of the fire; and she used to call it "the black old nigger," or "the nigger wench." Mercy Jane Wilbur, her granddaughter, remembered using to fill her pipe for her. She was a short, stout, blind old woman, full of merriment, who would "shake shen she laughed, like a bowl of jelly."

BIOGRAPHY: Whenever an infant was expected in the family of her daughter, Mercy Morse of North Underhill, she would go up there on horseback, taking with her a small hair-covered trunk fastened on behind the saddle. The children were told that the baby was brought in this.

BURIAL: Post:

BURIAL: Seeking descendants of John M. Palmer, Smith Palmer married to Caroline Mead, Hattie E. Palmer, Carrie Palmer, and Isabella Palmer.

Edgar and Caroline are buried in the Riverside Cemetery at Coxsackie, NY. Any information greatly appreciated.

BURIAL: Reply:

BURIAL: Look up the hill to Medway, NY. Medway is on Route 26 which runs between Coxsackie, NY to Greenville, NY. The family still resides there. There is a Palmer Family Cemetery adjacent to the home on Rt. 26, there is a transcription of this cemetery in the Town of New Baltimore section, there are also many other Palmers buried in the Medway Congregational Christian Church's cemetery, also on Rt. 26.

Carrie married^{24,25} Silas SMITH on 29 Nov 1866.

6. Mercy MEAD (Martin) was born 11 Jan 1807 in Pittsford, VT. She died^{26,27} 26 Dec 1881 in Jerico, Chittenden, CT and was buried in Jerico, Chittenden, CT.

BIOGRAPHY: From The Mead Line:

BIOGRAPHY: She was named for her mother's sister, Mercy Wright. Removed when not a year old with her parents to Underhill, VT. In girlhood went back to live with her uncle, Jonathan Wright, at Cornwall, VT, and stayed there until 1826, when she attended the Commencement at Middlebury College, where her mother's own cousin, Solomon Foote, later U.S. Senator from Vermont, graduated. At about the same time she saw General Lafayette, then on his tour through Vermont.

BIOGRAPHY: She had very scanty schooling, and when she was forty-five years old, and her daughters Lavinia, Lucy and Julia went to Manchester, NH to work in the cotton mills, and she would rite that she had to have the spelling book by her to show her the form of the letters, which she would partly write, partly print, a few lines at a time for days until finished, when she would date and send.

BIOGRAPHY: At about eighteen she went to work for Sara Church at Jerico, whose wife Lorinda Mead was her second cousin, and who lives at the north-west corner of the Lee River road and the road from Jerico Center to Underhill Flats (house still standing, 1916). There were four children in the Church family, and eight cows were kept, and she did all the works. For Mrs. Church was ill and died while she was there (1825), her grave being the first one, marked by a dark-colored stone, in the cemetery at Jerico Corners. For working all summer she received some wool, which she carded, spun, and wove into a bedquilt, using part for wadding. Later she taught one term of school in Underhill, and worked at Derrick Karner's in North Underhill.

BIOGRAPHY: She was short of stature, with brown hair and eyes; had a cheerful disposition, was full of humor, fond of playing with her grandchildren, and much beloved by them. She was a great admirer of Queen Victoria, and was ambitious that her children should have a good education. An industrious farmer's wife, making all the cheese and butter on a large farm; a devoted mother. She carded, spun and wove all the cloth needed for the family. She was a faithful Christian, and a member of the Congregational Church at North Underhill and a Jerico
